

ACCESSION_        NOTES

- C1        "This photo and the next two are perhaps the most valuable in this part of the collection because they show the north part of the Gatehouse. It was torn down many years ago, and now only the south portion remains. The photo was taken in summer and the north gatehouse was vine-covered. The arched window and door openings in the brickwork have keystones, and the structure has a very ""architectural"" appearance. A man, perhaps the custodian, is standing beside the north gatehouse. Mark on back of photo #865. (Woodlawn is Terre Haute's oldest existing cemetery. It was established in 1839.)"

C509 The Von Bichowsky plot is inside the iron fence. None of their markers are legible in this photo, but I have known this site for many years because of the unique fence and the huge German Linden (Tilia cordata europea) that once grew there. About 1984 the tree died, and the site is barren now. At one time it was one of the most majestic trees in Terre Haute, and there were wildflowers in its shade.

C514 "The L.G. (Levi Gale) Warren Mausoleum is probably the most imposing edifice, dedicated to funeral purposes, in Vigo County. Mr. Warren was president of what is now the First National Bank until his death in June, 1865. He owned Warren Park farm , which later became famous for its race horses. His younger brother, William B. Warren (1817 - 1884), was president of the Terre Haute Opera House Company at 4th and Wabash. He lived in what is now my home at 900-04S 4th Street from 1859 until 1874 when he built a larger, palatial, Italianate mansion. The Levi Gale Warren genealogy is traced in the book ""Warren Genealogy"" by Viola R. Cameron, genealogist (929.2W/Glass Case). The front (east) entrance to the Mausoleum is seen in this photo."

C890 Here, the photographer is looking southward down the East Drive. The west wall of the church is visible, also the outhouse.

C891 Different angle.

C892 "See the accompanying obituary of Hemsley Simmons, Terre Haute ""Express,"" May 1,1891, p.1. He is also mentioned on Thirza Bunce's book ""Hull-Stevenson Lines"" (929.2B). He married Mary Jane Stevenson (1814-1882). The Stevensons were founders of Mt. Pleasant Church. They donated the land where the church and cemetery are. It was only natural that Hemsley Simmons would build his home ""across the road from the Mt.Pleasant Church."" H.Simmons died in 1891 and the ""1895 Vigo County Atlas"" shows Wright L. Kidder as owning the Simmons homestead. Page 84 shows Mr. Kidder's properties including his city home at 626 S 6th ""and the former Simmons homestead in Section 2, Honey Creek Township. This photo shows the house before it was remodeled when the gingerbread was removed and the weatherboards were covered over with composition siding in two colors. The siding of the upstairs was lighter than that of the downstairs. Visible are the west and south sides, the south side having a 1-story porch. The yard has numerous shade trees."

C893 "Here, the house has been ""remuddled"" - gingerbread removed and old weatherboards covered with composition siding."

C894 Shows the west side of the house and this is the only photo that shows the north wing, which probably contained the kitchen.

C895 Shows the west and south sides and the roof of the large barn to the east.

C896 Autumn coloration in this old, faded color print. Apparently the remodeling took place after October 27, 1952. Shows west and south sides.

C897 Rather similar to C895.

C898 Shows west and south sides.

C899 Faded autumn color showing the south and east sides including the 1-story porch on the east side.

C900 This is an especially graphic photo of the Simmons-Kidder home. The house is set back from the brick road amid a grove of stately shade trees. A large double-forked Sycamore by the roadside displays advertisements of political candidates. In the foreground is the tombstone that memorializes John Jackson, Jr. and his wife, Isabell (1797-1881). The carving is not legible on the photograph, but I have identified the stone by seeing it on Friday, July 7, 1989. A large barn is visible near the right side of the photo.

C901 Same as C900.

C902 Different angle.

C903 Close-up.

C904 The house as seen from the south - southeast. An old coupe, perhaps a Ford Model A is parked in the driveway.

C905 Same as C904.

C906 Here, the house appears to be on a windswept knoll.

C907 Different angle.

C908 This is a good photo of the no longer existing barn.

C909 Here, the photographer was standing on the Old Riley Road near the base of the windmill and looking toward the house and barn.

C917 In memory of Hannah Gorby.

C918 Reverend W.C. Hensley died in the 29th years of his age. Photo also shows tombstone of Phebe Gertrude Brown.

C919 Different angle of the Hensley stone. Shows the Simmons-Kidder homestead and its large barn.

C932 "Eliza, daughter of J. and L.M. Jackson. Various ""Ray"" stones in the background."

C933 Sacred to the Memory of John Jackson....

C934 Same as C932, but photographer was standing back, and huge, plowed field is conspicuous in the background.

C935 Mary, wife of John Jackson died January 27, 1849, aged 65 years, 10 month, 19 days.

C936 Samuel Mattox died June 2, 1864, aged 31 years, 1 month, 26 days.

C939 Margaret, wife of William Price, died February 22, 1879, aged 70 years, 6 month, 13 days.

C940 Slightly different angle of C939.

C941 """"Died for the Union""", aged 21 years, 24 days."

C942 Slightly different angle.

C943 Slightly different angle.

C944 Rebecca, wife of James B. Ray.

C945

C946 Also shows tombstone of Thomas Carter.

C947 Hannah, wife of George H. Shaw. Beautiful carving.

C948 Stevenson family tombstone in foreground. In background is the Simmons-Kidder home (before it was remodeled) and its barn and silo. This photo does an excellent job of showing their location in relation to each other.

C949 G.M. Webb died September 30, 1851 aged 37 years, 4 month, 29 days.

C950 John W. and Lizzie B. Yeager.

C951 "Here, the photographer was facing southward, looking down the ""East Drive"" toward the ""South Hill"" which is the second oldest part of the cemetery at Mt. Pleasant. At the left side of the photo (beside the driveway) is the toolhouse - outhouse. It was torn down some years ago, probably about the same time the church was moved across the road in 1967. The ""low"" area of the cemetery ( shown in the right middleground of this photo) was not used for burial purposes until approximately 1975 to the present. My mother was buried in that area on May 10,1988."

C952 "Again, the photographer was looking southward from Davis Avenue, toward the toolhouse and ""East Drive."" The granite marker in the center of the photo is the Fredericks monument."

C953 "Again, the photographer is looking southward down the ""East Drive"" as it begins to climb the South hill."

C954 "Here, the photographer is standing in the low part of the cemetery and facing northeastward toward the toolhouse and oldest part of the cemetery. The foliage is so dense only a portion of the church is visible ""above"" the toolhouse."

C955 The G. M. Webb tombstone (now gone) is showing rather close to the south wall of the church.

C957 "Thos tombstone is severaly weathered. All that is decipherable is :
""Memory...William...widen...1784.""

C958 Same as C957. Close-up.

C959 A peacefull setting of old stones, cornfield, windmill, and white barn.

C960 Different angle of C959. The background shows quiet cornfields, where traffic now race across I-70, south of Margaret Avenue.

C961 ""Tombstones on a knoll.""

C962 A large configuration of a lamb probably marks a childs grave.

C963 "This is the Walter Dickerson (c.1784-1848) stone and is probably in the Gray Cemetery. - Included in this collection of photographs by Jesse W. Smith, a draftsman at the City Engineers Office and resident at 312 S 13 1/2 St. (1965 Terre Haute City Directory), was an envelope with 9 pictures. Two bore the number ""086"" on the back, and seven bore ""68H."" In all the pictures except one, the stones are undecipherable because the photographer was too far away and weeds obscured the view. The picture that is the exception features the tombstone of Walter Dickerson, whoe died December 23,1848 aged 54 years, 2 month, 12 days. Well, Markle ""Cemetery Records"" claim that he is buried at Cemetery #10 - the ""Gray Cemetery"", which is also in Lost Creek Township."

C964 This photo has a stone that is cut at an angle at the top.

C965 Same as C964. Different angle.

C966 This photo shows an obelisk and an old wire fence.

C967 Same as C966. Different angle.

C968 Same as C966. Different angle.

C969 This photo shows a fine rectangular iron fence inside the old wire fence.

C970 Here a sturdy board fence surrounds a small tree. Presumably there is a tombstone lying flat on the ground, which is not visible in this photograph.

C971 An unidentifiable arch-topped stone is clearly visible.

C972 I found this photo seperately in a large box and do not know for sure where the photo may have been taken. It could have been at Woodlawn since the terrain is flat and the cemetery is large. An Isaac Ball tent has been erected over the grave, the funeral service appears to be over, the relatives and friends gone, and two workmen appear to be ready to lower the coffin into the grave.

C508 Goodrich monument in background.

C557 Hannah was the wife of Dr. William Wood, she died aged 27 years. Also shows Sarah Wood, sister of Dr. William Maxwell and wife of William Douglas Wood. She died September 16, 1838, aged 21 years.
